Grab a bargain at the home of Irish sofas

Celebrating 37 years in the furniture business, Finline Furniture's annual New Year sale is on now, in their new showrooms in Douglas Woollen Mills.

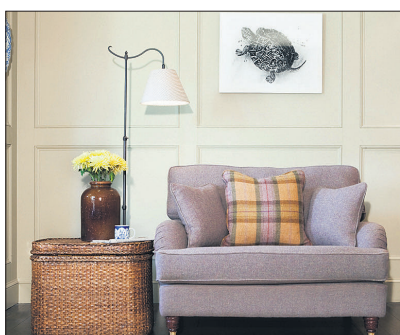

Whether you are on the look-out for that perfect bespoke chair, or looking to fit out a new home in spring, the Finline Furniture interior sale will have something to suit, with up to 40-70 per cent reductions on offer.

Incredible offers include the Alexandra large sofa reduced from €1,864 to €1,050, the Elton from €1,475 to €850 and the popular La Scala from €1,615 to €1,050.

Finline Furniture quality will not be sacrificed as all sofas and chairs ordered in their sale will, as per usual, come with a 10-year frame and construction guarantee. All furniture is handmade in Ireland and there is over 3,000 choices of fabric to suit each and every model.

Eugene Cleary, Finline Furniture Cork Store Manager commented: "Every January, this sale is the highlight of the year for Finline Furniture and should not be missed if you are thinking about buying a new sofa or refurbishing your home."

"I recommend you do not miss out on this spectacular sale!"

All Finline's furniture is handmade in Ireland and there is over 3,000 choices of fabric to suit each and every model.

With their recent expansion to St Patrick's Woollen Mills, the family-run company are excited to bring their craftsmanship and affordable service to a wider audience across Cork and Munster.

Finline Furniture have been producing hand-crafted, custom-built furniture since 1979 and their interiors expertise has proven invaluable to Irish consumers, again and again.

Many of the Finline Furniture craftspeople have been with the company for over 20 years, honing and perfecting their skills; and translating this into the finished furniture that gives Finline Furniture their well-deserved title of 'The Home of Irish Sofas'. The Finline Furniture annual January sale began on Friday 8 January across their national locations, including their Emo, Laois factory, with reductions also happening in the Long Mile Road, Dublin and Cork showrooms at Douglas Woollen Mills.

Reduce the city's carbon footprint with Ecocel

With all building materials, transport is the biggest contributor of carbon emissions, something that affects us more and more - just see recent floods and the wettest December since records began.

Ecocel cellulose insulation is manufactured in Cork city at the Marina Commercial Park, which is a ten-minute walk from the city centre.

As Ecocel cellulose is manufactured from recycled newspapers and locally sourced, when installed in an attic in Cork, it is carbon negative which means no emissions.

Because it is made from natural fibres, it will last the lifespan of the building. In a retrofit situation, it is not possible to fit vapour check (air tightness membrane).

Ecocel as it is installed in attics, creates an airtight thermal barrier with no gaps and is 30 per cent safer than no insulation in a fire.

Ecocel substitutes and avoids the use of petrochemical insulations, which have a high embodied carbon level and reduces imports. Ecocel stores the carbon that was sequestered by trees and prevents CO2 from re-emitting to the atmosphere from decaying waste.

By using a locally produced, safer in fire, and better thermal performance product in houses across the city - as well as in those under the control of the City Council - Cork could become the leading city in Ireland in relation to reducing carbon emissions.

For more information on Ecocel, visit ecocel.ie and watch 'Ecocel' on RTE1 on Tuesday 19 January at 7pm.
